Early Life and Training

Angelica Kauffman was born in Chur, Switzerland, on October 30, 1741. Her father, Joseph Johann Kauffman, was a respected painter who recognized and nurtured her artistic abilities from a young age. At the age of eleven, Kauffman began formal training in painting and music in Milan.

She later studied in Rome, where she absorbed the influence of the Italian masters.

Neoclassical Style

Kauffman's work is characterized by the Neoclassical style, which emerged in the mid-18th century as a reaction against the elaborate Baroque style. Neoclassical art emphasized clear lines, harmonious compositions, and subjects drawn from classical mythology and history. Kauffman's paintings embody these ideals, with their elegant figures, refined colors, and carefully orchestrated scenes.

Portraits and History Paintings

Kauffman excelled in both portraiture and history painting. Her portraits capture the likeness and personality of her subjects with great sensitivity and charm. She also created numerous history paintings depicting scenes from Greek and Roman mythology, as well as biblical and literary narratives.

Legacy

Angelica Kauffman's reputation as a leading artist of her time was firmly established by the mid-18th century. She was elected to prestigious academies in London and Rome, and her work was highly sought after by collectors and patrons throughout Europe. Kauffman's paintings continue to be celebrated for their beauty, technical skill, and enduring appeal.
