In the bustling streets of pre-Castro Havana, the air is alive with the rhythm of son music, the sweet aroma of Cuban coffee, and the animated chatter of locals. The city is a vibrant melting pot of cultures, where Spanish colonial architecture stands side by side with Art Deco masterpieces and the remnants of a glorious past.

As the narrative unfolds, we are transported to the sun-drenched countryside of Cuba, where sugar plantations stretch as far as the eye can see and the rhythms of traditional Cuban music fill the air. We meet a young man who works the fields, his life deeply intertwined with the cycles of nature and the traditions of his ancestors.

Finally, we encounter a wise elder who lived through the tumultuous events leading up to the revolution. Their memories offer a poignant glimpse into a world lost to time, a world of both beauty and complexities, where the seeds of change were already being sown.
