The three men, Apollo Kaggwa, Yosia Nadiope, and Semei Kakungulu, were sent to Europe by King Mwanga II of Buganda in 1887. Their mission was to learn about European culture and technology, and to seek support for Buganda's independence.

The men traveled to England, France, Germany, and Italy. They met with Queen Victoria, Pope Leo XIII, and other prominent European leaders. They also visited factories, schools, and other institutions.

The men's journey was a success. They learned a great deal about European culture and technology. They also gained the support of several European leaders for Buganda's independence.

However, the men's journey also had a tragic ending. In 1889, King Mwanga II was overthrown by the British. The men were arrested and imprisoned. Kaggwa and Nadiope were eventually released, but Kakungulu was executed.

Muganda in Europe is a valuable historical document. It provides a unique insight into the early interactions between Uganda and Europe, and sheds light on the complex history of colonialism in Africa. The book is also a moving account of the journey of three young men who risked their lives to fight for their country's independence.
